[Joe and Briscoe are in the 'El Toro' bar. SWIFTY and INEZ enter quickly. SWIFTY is a precocious youth of 17, inclined to be excitable, but well-meaning. INEZ, 19, already has the air of a mature coquette¹. She is attractively dressed in a gay coloured cotton with a low neck and frilled skirt over stiff petticoats.]

- 5 The background music is now a victory chorus as the stick-fighting crowd make their way to 'El Toro' to celebrate.]

SWIFTY: They coming! Singing the victory chorus!
Everything ready?

JOE: You have plenty brass.

- 10 SWIFTY: It was battle royal!

JOE: Now look here, you –.

INEZ: Joe, don't get upset.

SWIFTY: What the hell I do?

JOE: You walk off the job. Leave the shop wide open.

- 15 SWIFTY: But I leave you relaxing inside!

JOE: Jesu-Marie!

INEZ: Remember your pressure!

JOE: The boy talk as if he owning the store!

BRISCOE: Who win the fight?

- 20 INEZ: Tiny Satan.

SWIFTY: With a blow
So swift you only hear when it pass
Like a breeze. He is stickman of class!

[He takes up a poui-stick to demonstrate. JOE snatches it away.]

- 25 JOE: Go busy yourself out in the back.
From tomorrow you could take all day to slack.

- SWIFTY: Oh, Mr Joe! Miss Inez, please!
- INEZ: Give him a chance, Joe. He didn't mean
To aggravate you. Swifty, see and clean
Up the place. Come on, make yourself handy.
- SWIFTY: Yes, mum!
- JOE: [to BRISCOE] She take over the business already.
Just like I say. Is only the key
To the strong-box I still call my own.
- INEZ: Portagee Joe, when you use that tone
I must be on guard. Like a born creole
You know all the tricks to fool-up a girl.
- [She gives him a gentle hug.]
- SWIFTY: The female fans mob Tiny with kisses,
First to besiege him was Miss Inez!
- INEZ: If you can't keep quiet, bite on your tongue.
You have too much lip for one so young.

SECTION B – POETRY

2. Read the following poem carefully and answer ALL the questions that follow.

Concert

Brother Kingsley had the swiftest legs,
they would move like sharpened blades
cutting through finishing line tapes
on sports days when we would receive
5 for prizes, dictionaries and holy Bibles.

He was a dancer, could split, snap-fall,
boogie, gallows, and shuffle better
than any other boy who called himself dancer.
As soon as his heels touched ground
10 they would lift up again, pushing against slow air, seeking to align themselves with the fastest moving currents in the atmosphere.

At the talent show, we were sure he'd win.
The entire school was behind him, cheering
15 his every turn, split and spin, he was winning till he affected a clutching movement he had seen
the older men practice.

Miss Stirling judged that move
too adult and dangerous to youth.
20 She awarded the prize to a girl
who rattled out, with nervous pebbles
in her mouth, a dull unburnished memory gem¹.

Dressed as she was in a drooping slipper-satin
christian-quattie² dress, we booed the results
25 of this unfair contest and spoke for years
of how they robbed him.

¹ A memory gem is a short quotation (usually from the Bible or a famous person)

² Quattie means of little or no value

SECTION C – PROSE FICTION

3. Read the following passage carefully and answer ALL the questions that follow.

Michael went back inside for two more bottles and they drank them. Then, in the twilight, they fell asleep, slumped up against each other. In the distance the sun slipped unobserved and lonely into the cold sea.

- 5 Leila, the taller and lighter of the two girls, obediently followed her friend as they walked purposefully to the end of the street and around the corner by Jumbies rum bar. There they both faltered and listened to the smoky noises leaking through the closed shutters and underneath the crooked door.

- 10 Even from this distance it was clear that the men were both asleep. They approached, Leila feeling much the more foolish for having encouraged Millie to spend a hopeful, wasted hour outside Government House while knowing in her heart that neither Bradeth nor Michael would come. She lagged behind a little.

Millie pushed Bradeth's shoulder and he shook himself away from Michael. Then Michael's somnolent head fell quickly, but he woke before it made contact with the ground.

'You both have a nice sleep, then?' asked Millie, her hands firmly on her hips.

- 15 The men rubbed their eyes and stretched. Bradeth explained, 'We just decided to take a nap and check out what a bit of peace and quiet feel like, but it's not looking like we going finish the test.'

'I see,' said Millie. 'Well, now that the testing done maybe you don't mind testing your backside up to Sandy Bay with me where my aunt wants to have a word with you about something.'

Bradeth moved to get up. 'Toosie?'

- 20 'It's only one aunt I has in Sandy Bay, or maybe you hear of a next one.'

'I just checking, that's all,' Bradeth stood, hind legs first, and reached up to hold his head straight.

'So you get hangover as well?' asked Millie.

'It's just a little headache that I had for a long time now,' said Bradeth. 'A long time now.'
